"I took twenty-three supplements every morning for eight years and never once felt fixed. The thing that finally worked was forgetting the entire bag on a trip and not taking a single one for five days. By day three, I slept through the night for the first time in two years."

Hook strategy: open on the most literal, most recognisable image in the entire avatar's life — a palm full of mismatched pills. No face for the first 3 seconds. Faces in frame 1 read as "ad"; hands read as "someone's life." Her face arrives at 0:06 exactly when the VO turns emotional ("never once felt fixed"), so the first thing you ever see of her is disappointment, not a greeting.

Prompts below assume GLOBAL_PREFIX + GLOBAL_SUFFIX + NEG from the bible.

H1-01 · 0:00–0:03.5 · 3.5s · COLD OPEN

VO: "I took twenty-three supplements every morning"

Why: The palm is the whole avatar in one image. It's absurd without commentary, which is what makes it stop the scroll. No face yet.

IMAGE — Nano Banana Pro

MOTION (I2V)

Locked-off overhead shot, no camera move. One final capsule drops from the bottle into the palm and settles among the others with a tiny bounce. The palm tilts by three degrees under the weight. The pills shift slightly. Nothing else in the frame moves. 3 seconds, real-time, no slow motion.

→ hands off: MATCH-SHAPE — the round white bottle cap sits top-right of frame; H1-02 opens on a faded circular label at the same size and screen position.

H1-02 · 0:03.5–0:06 · 2.5s

VO: "for eight years"

Why: Don't say eight years — show eight years. Sun-bleached labels, peeling corners, and dried water rings on the counter do the arithmetic for you. This is the shot that makes the whole premise credible.

IMAGE — Nano Banana Pro

Extreme close-up, slightly low angle across a cream quartz bathroom counter, looking down a row of supplement bottles receding into shallow focus. The nearest label is visibly sun-faded and curling at one corner, its printing gone chalky, a dried adhesive ring where an old price sticker was peeled off. On the counter surface: three overlapping dried white water rings and a fine dusting of powder. 50mm, f/2.0, focus on the nearest curled label, everything beyond it dissolving. Flat cool window light camera-left. GRADE-A.

MOTION (I2V)

Very slow 10cm dolly forward along the row of bottles, drifting past the faded label. The depth of field slides gently so the second and third bottles come into focus as the first falls out. Absolutely no other movement. 2.5 seconds.

→ hands off: PAN-THROUGH — camera is drifting forward; H1-03 opens already drifting forward toward the mirror at the same rate.

H1-03 · 0:06–0:09.5 · 3.5s · FIRST FACE

VO: "and never once felt fixed."

Why: The gut-punch. She's just swallowed. The water glass comes down. And there's nothing. She holds her own eye contact in the mirror a beat too long — the look of someone doing a thing she no longer believes in.

IMAGE — GPT Image (softer on emotional face holds)

W1. L1 – master bathroom. Medium close-up of the woman shot into the vanity mirror, so we see her reflection while the back of her shoulder is soft in the near foreground. She has just swallowed; a glass of water is coming down from her mouth, held at chest height, her throat still settling. Her mouth is closed in a flat line, eyebrows slightly raised in the middle, eyes tired and a little glassy. She is looking at her own reflection, not the camera. Out-of-focus bottles crowd the bottom of the frame. 50mm, f/2.0, eye level, framed slightly off-centre with headroom above her. Flat cool overcast light from the window camera-left, a soft grey fill from the tile. GRADE-A: desaturated, flat, greenish shadows.

MOTION (I2V)

Camera holds nearly static with a faint handheld drift. She lowers the glass fully to the counter. Her eyes stay on her own reflection. She takes one shallow breath in and lets it out – her shoulders drop about two centimetres and do not come back up. She blinks once, slowly. No smile. She does not look at the camera at any point. 3.5 seconds.

→ hands off: LIGHT-WIPE — the sheer curtain lifts and passes a soft shadow across the mirror; cut inside the shadow into the dark kitchen.

H1-04 · 0:09.5–0:12.5 · 3s · TURN

VO: "The thing that finally worked was forgetting the entire bag"

Why: Hard tonal turn. Empty dark kitchen, the bag sitting alone. Nobody is in this shot — the absence is the story. Headlights sweeping the wall tell you she's already gone.

IMAGE — Nano Banana Pro

No people. L2 – kitchen at 4am, unlit. On the warm oak butcher-block island sits a quilted grey canvas zip bag, bulging, half-unzipped with two supplement bottles visible inside. The rest of the kitchen is in near-darkness, white shaker cabinets reading as deep grey-blue. A hard slash of warm car-headlight glow rakes across the back wall and the upper cabinets. 35mm, f/2.8, low eye-level across the island so the bag sits large in the lower third against the dark room. GRADE-B: cold blue pre-dawn, crushed shadows, one warm sodium accent.

MOTION (I2V)

Camera locked off. The slash of headlight glow travels slowly across the back wall from right to left and fades out, leaving the room darker than it started. The bag does not move. Nothing else moves. 3 seconds.

→ hands off: MATCH-ACTION — the headlight sweep exits frame left; H1-05 opens with an aircraft strobe entering frame left at the same rhythm.

H1-05 · 0:12.5–0:15.5 · 3sVO: "on a trip"

Why: Two seconds of orientation. Shot from behind — we don't need her face, we need the geography and the hour. 4am airports look like nowhere on earth, which is exactly the isolation we want.

IMAGE — GPT Image

W3. L5 — airport gate at 4am. The woman shot from behind at three-quarter rear, standing alone at a floor-to-ceiling glass wall, one hand on the handle of an upright carry-on. Her faint reflection is doubled in the glass. Beyond the glass: wet tarmac with orange sodium lights smeared across it and the nose of a parked aircraft. The gate seating behind her is completely empty. 35mm, f/2.8, eye level, she occupies the left third of the frame with the glass and tarmac filling the rest. GRADE-B: cold blue-grey, deep shadows, orange sodium accents.

MOTION (I2V)

Very slow 12cm push in toward her back. She shifts her weight from one foot to the other and her hand tightens once on the luggage handle. Outside the glass, a single red aircraft strobe pulses twice. Her reflection drifts slightly with the camera. She never turns around. 3 seconds.

→ hands off: FOCUS-HANDOFF — rack to the glass reflection until the frame is soft; open H1-06 on soft white tile and rack in.

H1-06 · 0:15.5–0:17.5 · 2s

VO: "and not taking a single one for five days."

Why: The negative-space shot. A guest bathroom counter with nothing on it. After ninety seconds of visual clutter, emptiness hits like a held breath. This is the single cheapest, highest-impact frame in the hook.

IMAGE — Nano Banana Pro

No people. L6 – a small guest bathroom at her sister's house. Wide, almost bare white tile counter with a dated cream backsplash and a floral wallpaper border. On the entire counter there are exactly two objects: a single toothbrush lying flat on a folded washcloth, and a small unwrapped bar of soap. Vast empty counter space either side. 35mm, f/4, low eye-level across the counter surface so the emptiness dominates the lower two thirds. Soft warm-ish morning light from a frosted window camera-right. GRADE-B warming toward E – the first hint of warmth in the film.

MOTION (I2V)

Almost imperceptible slow drift right across the empty counter, revealing yet more bare surface. Nothing in the frame moves at all. Perfectly still. 2 seconds.

→ hands off: MATCH-SHAPE — the round bar of soap sits centre-frame; H1-07 opens on the round face of the brass alarm clock at the same size and position.

H1-07 · 0:17.5–0:20 · 2.5s · HOOK PAYOFF

VO: "By day three, I slept through the night for the first time in two years."

Why: The promise, delivered as confusion rather than joy. She isn't happy yet — she's disoriented. Real people don't wake up grateful, they wake up going "wait, what time is it?" That's the beat that reads as true.

IMAGE — GPT Image

W2. L6 – sister's guest bedroom. The woman lying on her side in a patterned quilt, head on the pillow, just woken. Her eyes are open and unfocused, hair flattened on one side, a pillow crease on her cheek. She is looking across the bed toward a small brass alarm clock on the nightstand reading 7:04. Broad warm morning sun falls in a hard band across the quilt and the lower half of her face. Her expression is confusion, not happiness – brows slightly drawn, mouth relaxed and open a few millimetres. 50mm, f/2.0, camera low at mattress height. GRADE-E: warm returning daylight, gentle saturation, open shadows.

MOTION (I2V)

Camera holds at mattress height with the faintest handheld float. Her eyes refocus on the clock. She blinks twice, slowly. Her brow lifts very slightly as it registers. She does not smile, does not sit up, does not look at the camera. Dust motes drift through the band of sunlight. 2.5 seconds, real-time.

→ hands off into body: FOCUS-HANDOFF — rack from her face to the sunlit dust until soft, then open S01 on the soft bathroom window and rack in. VO carries the transition.
